

Lawyer wins dating game

Matchmaking company sees him as ideal date for Kyan May

LUNCH Actually, Asia's premier lunch dating agency, held the much-hyped-about dream date between model and Miss World Malaysia 2009 finalist, Kyan May and the lucky winner of the Dream Date competition.

The competition was open to all single men in Malaysia.

Many hopeful entries were received—but, in the end, it was lawyer Jerry Tiew who caught the attention of Lunch Actually's matchmaking professionals.

The 26-year-old Tiew enjoys an active lifestyle, with an inclination towards outdoor activities, particularly diving.

He indulges in movies, describing action, comedy and horror as his favourite genres of movies. He also enjoys rock, R&B and pop music.

Staying true to the company's name, the dream date took place over lunch at Modesto's, located in the trendy vicinity of Sri Hartamas in Kuala Lumpur.

"I was pleasantly surprised at Lunch Actually's choice of Tiew as the winner. He has an exciting personality and we found that we have many common interests.

"Needless to say, it was a very interesting chat over lunch," said the beaming Kyan May after the date.

The Celebrity Dream Date was a write-in competition, encouraging single men to send in their entries for a shot at winning the dream date.

The competition was held for the first time in Malaysia after Lunch Actually conducted similar competitions in Singapore and Hong Kong, with much success.

In fact, after the competition in Hong Kong, the celebrity in that competition — singer, actress and model Ella Koon — is currently seriously dating the winner.

The success in the Hong Kong competition can be attributed to the selection process of the winner of the competition, which is very similar to the stringent, six-step process that the dating consultants at Lunch Actually have in place in the selection of the dates for their clients.

Lunch Actually founding director Violet Lim said they saw the opportunity to expand the competition to Malaysia after meeting with Kyan May.

Commenting on the match, Lim said, "Jerry has an amazing lifestyle and we strongly believe that he is the ideal candidate for Kyan May. They both enjoy outdoor activities and their personalities gel perfectly, seeing that they are both extroverted and spontaneous."
